

Letter to myself

Dear future Richard,

As you already know this is a letter to you regarding yourself as an individual. Man, you must be someone really important by now. It has been 10 years since we wrote this letter and I hope everything has happened for you. I hope everything is okay and nothing has happened to you that you won't be able to read this letter. I hope you're married and that you have kids to call son or princess. You know that it wasn't easy to be you back then. Slacking off and waiting to the last minute to have everything done. You better have finished college and have some type of master degree. I know it's unlikely now since we're on probation and everything is a little tight. I have so much to say that I want to be able to ask you about the future and so many dreams I really hope you didn't forget this and just let it all go. As I know you I really hope these things happened at the right moment for us to be happy.

Well let's start off with how's life? Are you working? Are we finally doing something we enjoy? Are we teaching or are we just working a job that deals with Health? If not what are we doing? I really hope that life isn't hard compared to right now. You might have your own troubles but remember you can do it. Anyways just wanted to know some things about the future you and remind you that there are things out there worse than what you have right now unless I'm totally wrong. I'm sitting outside HED 450 writing this letter to you. I still can't believe you might be reading this in the future and reflect on how things used to be in the past. I wonder if there might be anything that we thought might be in the future.

Richard as much as we may think we know something, always remember that life is hard and we need help sometimes. Don't take the burden of taking on everything yourself and keep it within yourself. Dream big and live your life to the fullest. Don't sell yourself short and do the best things at everything. I have faith in us and never forget that we are here for the long run.

Always,
Richard
